Wednesday, October 6th, the club had at the residence of Mr. Horner. Some of the members were out of town, but enough were present to make the meeting, as usual, both pleasant and profitable.

In the absence of both president and vice-president, the meeting was graciously presided over by Mrs. Northcutt. The secretary being unavoidably absent, Mrs. Horner kindly filled her place.

The history of Rome was continued through the wars with Macedon and the Third Punic War. The unexpected heroism developed when too late by the Carthaginians—the courage born of despair—was dwelt upon, and Mrs. Northcut read a vivid description of the destruction of the magnificient city of Carthage, which stood for 700 years. She also related of the heroic conduct of the wife of Hamilcar, who preferred death for herself and her children to a life of ease with her traitor husband. Heartrending as was the destruction of Carthage by the Romans, it was nevertheless the “survival of the fittest.” Roman civilization being better for the world than Phoenician civilization with its intellectual despotism.

Mr. Horner’s selections for reading are always interesting; on this occasion her subject was “American Collections of Art,” by an English artist, who writes most interestingly of the collections of paintings, both public and private, which have been made in America. He even says that America bids fair to become in time “the Louvre of the world.”

Mr. Piano treated the club to a scientific article on “The Future of the Earth.” French scientists believe that the earth will in time separate into fragments which will go whirling through space as meteors. The article was well read, and exceedingly interesting, but the dismal conclusions of the French scientists, the Dr. L. D. decline to accept.

The club will meet next Wednesday with Mrs. Northcut.
